Review: Gives decision of Northeast People's Government establishing a system of fixed responsibility in production as a preliminary step to the launching of a "new production record" movement. Ten articles discuss the practical application of the system in various factories in Northeast China and explain the significance and meaning of the system. According to the decision of the Northeast People's Government, industry was in a complete state of disruption with no one assuming responsibility for management, supervision, inspection, and various phases of production in the existing enterprises. One article describes how the Kuang-ho Machine Factory installed the system.

Other articles describe the work of the factory investigation (inspection) system, and give case studies showing the operation of this and other systems.
